Intruder Shot Down by Charles Verrall After He Had Twice Turned On the Jets to Smother His Victims.

A burglar, who deserved his fate, was shot to death early to-day by Charles Verrall in a flat at No. 225 East Eighty-third street after he had attempted to murder the Verrall family of four persons by smothering them with illuminating gas.

The police records of this city contain no instance of such a coldblooded, desperate and inexcusable crime as this burglar sought to commit in order that he might steal a few dollars worth of goods in the

The members of the Verrall family owe their lives to the wakefulness of one of the two children, Charles, six months old. The baby cried twice during the night and on both occasions Ars. Verrall, going to the kitchen for milk, found the gas jets turned on.

After the second visit to the kitchen the burglar was discovered. He escaped to an adjoining flat, where Verrall caught him and shot him to
